GET SET FOR SEVENTH WAR LOAN

The Seventh War Loan is just around the corner. It starts officially on May 14th. The national quota is $14,000,000,000, and is obviously will be used to buy one half of its proportionate share (national quota $7,000,000,000 larger than in drive sixty days ago).

The big drive will be in the sale of E bonds.

Appomattox County has finished the trail Virginia for the last two drives. We were first in the Old Dominion to go over the top. That is a wonderful record and we will want to exceed it for the Seventh. But to do it will require teamwork and patriotic investment to the first penny of the drive. Let's get set and be ready for the starting gun!

TUCK AND COLLINS

The announcement that Hon. A. Willis Robertson would not be a candidate for Governor of Virginia, paving the way for the announcement of the candidacy of Colgate W. Darden, Jr., and thus the office of Governor of Virginia is a high and coveted position, was received by many that Mr. Robert on was of such invaluable service in Congress during After World War I inflation, but it was five years before the mark fell to worthless. Financiers say that the wholesale will be rected everywhere on the mone markets this week without delay.

A rumor that reached London last week that Germany was ready to enter the race, but that difficulties in finding commodities climbing in price and people ready to spend them, is not foreseable that he could be defeated. We believe that he will make an excellent Governor.

At least two candidates are already in the field for Governor: Preston Collins, of Marion, and Charles Fenwick, of Arlington. Each has a good record in the General Assembly. His race however, that the people will be elect Tuck for Governor and the gentleman from Tazewell Collins for lieutenant governor. This will be an ideal ticket.

EASTER

Easter stands for rebirth, the immortality of the human soul. At this 1945 Easter season we firmly believe that there will be a rebirth of civilization, religion, culture and human progress in the bright new post-war world. Mankind must and will go forward and face the sunrise of tomorrow with renewed faith, courage and fortitude. Much of the old will pass away, dead. But it will arise anew, better, cleaner and nobler!

THE SMALLER NATIONS

The smaller nations did not all go with the aggressor nations outside of fascism. Some of them, Sweden, Switzerland, Portugal and Spain did business with the Nazis. Finland fought on the side of Hitler, and Turkey refused to help the Allies when Germany might have shortened the war. Argentina (is never been pro-Allied) Ireland stayed on.

Yet, many of these smaller nations will clamor at the San Francisco Conference for great voice in shaping the world peace organization. And certain elements in America and the ballyhoo for them will make their demands as the late Wendell Willkie called on the nations of the world "stand up and be counted." Some of the truly chapters in the history of the war have been written by nations like France, Norway, Yugoslavia, Holland. These have earned of their right to a voice in the shaping of the future. But the fact remains that the freedom of the world now rests upon the United States, Russia, Great Britain and China. These are the might and future co-operation of these four nations will depend the cause of peace in "our time."

THE SPECIAL SESSION

The special session of the Virginia General Assembly accomplished what it was called to do, provide ways to call a constitutional convention to revise those in the armed service. Also the matter of free schools and [illegible] Both of these matters will be [illegible] The school system of the state and general [illegible] Only one thing [illegible] to pay for session, and [illegible] "pay-as-you-go-stamp" [illegible] without debate or adequate hearing. In this respect, it was worse than he lush [illegible] Congress.

THE WHOLE POWER OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE

From Danville Register

American correspondents in Germany who are particularly on the lookout for revealing attitudes by individual Germans find a greater tendency than ever to revile Hitler and to try to convince American that the German people, in the heart of hearts, were never really in favor of him. Fraternizing between American soldiers and German people is forbidden, but the correspondents find it easy to get into the stockades where civilians are herded and if they have been registered and the reporters can get a fairly good cross section of opinion. They are all struck with the similarity of some Germans to whisper into the ear of the reporters that "I was forced into the party. I had to." Or "he made him. I welcome the arrival of the Americans."

This, of course, is a counterpart of the sentiment at the end of the last war, a variation of an old theme. After the Kaiser had fled and nobody felt under any special obligation to him, and when there was no longer the fear of being clouted over the head by a Prussian officer, the people said the same thing.

But there never can be any doubt this time that the avalanche was hand-in-glove with Hitler, cheerfully and enthusiastically went along with him, supporting him in fair weather and until now.

Thomas Mann, the great interpreter of Germany, whose hatred for the Nazis made him a voluntary exile while it was still possible for him to leave has clearly defined the German responsibility.

"It is impossible," he wrote, "to demand of the abused nations of Europe hat they shall draw a sharp dividing line between Nazism and the German people. The world has gone through five years of suffering and sacrifice, a war unleashed by Germany. And, from the very first day of this war German's opponents were faced by the combined German ingenuity, energy, intelligence, discipline, military efficiency, - in short, by the whole power of the German nation which stood as such behind the regime."

WARTIME MOTOR CARS

From New York Times

After checking figures with the OPA and other government agencies, the Office of War Information reports the output of automobiles, trucks and buses will far exceed this year the total during any previous period since the beginning of the war. At least 3,700,000 passenger cars and trucks will be produced during the year, from a standstill already so diminished as to bring it very close to the minimum below which our war economy cannot operate under full swing. The tire situation was never more critical. It is at its worst in truck tires although the tube industry has made prodigious gains in production. Passenger car tires are also extremely short. The very tempo of the war itself has created new demands for tires, gasoline and lubrications.

In these circumstances there is need for all of us, in the coming months, to regard our motor vehicles as homefront weapons actually being used against the enemy. We shall conserve them if we want to contribute all we can to the victory cry, in the knowledge that, if we don't they and their tires will be irreplaceable. The less we can do is to practice those small but important habits of conservation, such as moderate speed, periodic checking of tire inflation and wheel alignment and battery maintenance. And, most important, we will drive no unnecessary mile.

WAR WEARINESS

From Peninsula Enterprise

Military leaders are said to fear the a kind of war weariness may spread among the people after the first joy passes over their victory against Germany. I may take six months to get the soldiers and their equipment and supplies tranferred from the European theater to the Pacific.

It is predic ed that the number of discharges when the German war ends will be relatively few. The idea is expressed that some people may begin to clamor for the re urn of the troops to the United States. Military leaders perhaps fear that a demand may gain power to have some kind of compromise peace fixed up with Japan.

So far there appears little sign of any wide-spread demand for such a peace. The feeling of Americans against Japan is even hotter than that which exists against the Nazis. The Japs made a foul and treacherous attack on our forces a Pearl Harbor. Countless acts of abominable cruelty have been committed by them. Indignation against a country which can perpetrate such outrages is intense, and it still demands a fight to the finish.

Our people long for the end of the war. They are weary of fighting and destruction, and saddened by the casualty lists. But they do not want Japan left in any such shape tha it can renew this war in a period of years, and they want our people to stay on the job and misery again.

So our people are still going strong, and public sentiment says that this time a thorough job is ould be done and one that will last. Many people feel that the Allies had in 1918 marched to Berlin, he spectacle of such a thorough conquest would have so scared the Germans that they would not have stopped at a new war. A similarly thorough conquest of Japan will help maintain permanent peace.

Easter Morning

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Busted Illusion: Because I accidentally happened to encounter J. Miller Frazier at the Biltmore, another illusion has been busted completely. Having heard so much of it over the air waves, I had become convinced that all tobacco sales were accompanied by long drawn chants of gibberish by the various auctioneers. "Colonel" Frazier, long credit manager of the old Waldorf-Astoria, later managing director of the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia and now a resident of Lexington, Ky., assured me that such an impression was all wrong—at least, so far as his part of the Blue Grass state is concerned. According to "Colonel" Frazier, sales of tobacco are conducted nowadays so that there is no noise or extended gibberish. On the contrary, he averred, in the big warehouses down his way, the sales are carried on swiftly, efficiently—and in good English.

How It's Done: "The other day I drove out from Lexington to a warehouse owned by a friend," continued "Colonel" Frazier, "which surely must be one of the biggest anywhere—I assure you, it has more than six acres of floor space under one roof. The day of my visit, something like 2,500,000 pounds of tobacco were being sold and that's considerable tobacco anywhere. Naturally, having done my share of cussing at radio 'tobacco auctioneers,' I was surprised at what I saw and heard. All the tobacco had been graded by government officials and was in large hampers, each numbered and marked with a ceiling price. The buyers stood about and the salesman without any 'eeny, meeny, miny, mo' stuff, simply disposed of the tobacco in this way, '45 goes to you, 46 to you, 47 to you,' identifying each purchaser with a nod, until the whole quantity offered for sale had been allocated."

Ears of the Law: On a Manhattan-bound ferry boat after a long, hard day transporting patients to and from Halloran hospital on Staten island, a young Women's Volunteer services ambulance driver remarked to a girl companion she was so all in that only a smoke would revive her. She had expected to pick up a pack of cigarets at the hospital PX when she had concluded her tour of duty, she continued, but that was as bare as Mother Hubbard's well known cupboard. "The only thing left for me to do is to go to the black market," she averred. With that, a man who had been standing quietly in the background stepped forward and asked her what she knew about a black market in cigarets. The girl replied quickly that she knew nothing at all—but the man turned back his coat lapel and disclosed a badge showing he was an OPA inspector. Also, he supplied the girl in uniform with a cigaret.

Inspiration: At the party at the Hotel Bryant in his honor given just after he had replaced Frank Sinatra on the "Hit Parade" program, Tess Buxton, of Tune in magazine, informed Lawrence Tibbett that one of his most ardent fans was her sister, Mrs. Lucile Marsh. Miss Buxton added she could be with Sinatra every day in the week and her sister would not be interested at all but that she would have to give her every detail in regard to her meeting with Tibbett. Then she told of the canary that was about to be destroyed because it refused to sing. "My sister felt so sorry for it, she took it home," Miss Buxton continued. "Its name was Ecstasy. She changed it to Tibbett—and until the day Tib died, he fairly sang his heart out." And Lawrence Tibbett beamed.

English Girl to Learn Secrets of U. S. Pancakes

HAGERSTOWN, MD. — The American "invasion" of England now shows promise of altering the traditional English diet.

Pfc. Robert Rider of Hagerstown wrote his mother, Mrs. Earl Rider, for a sack of pancake flour and her recipe for making those luscious hotcakes.

"I want to train my English girl in the art of pancake making," he said.

...w women and girls ...ay get wanted relief ...m functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervousness, due to functional periodic disorders. Here's how it may help:
1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.
2 Started 3 days before ... it helps relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.
Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did. 6

Take My Word For It!

By FRANK COLBY

READERS' CORNER

From C. B., Sewickley:

My commonplace query: please tell a fella

How to pronounce correctly "umbrella."

The stress upon "UM" brings umbrage to me,

So, dear etymologist, list to my plea.

Oft have I been an umbrella loaner,

And rarely have they come back to their owner.

But my "loan" to you gives me no concern,

For I'm hoping to have a linguistic return.

Answer: Reminds me of the ancient doggerel:

The rain falls alike on the just and unjust feller,

But less often on the unjust, for he steals the just's umbreller.

Correct pronunciation: um-BRELL-uh.

From M.D.L., Akron: In a current "whodunit," I found this delicious example of loony logic: "He worked with rubber gloves on his hands which he never took off." A robot, perhaps?

Answer: Yes, and M.J.R.P., of Washington, has discovered his sister in a want ad: "Girl, colored, wishes job as elevator operator or soda fountain!"

KATE SMITH asked to write this message on Saving Used Fats!

"The help of every woman is needed in saving used fats for hundreds of battlefield and homefront essentials. But some of us don't know all the ways we can do it. Here are a few points I've found helpful."—Kate Smith

OTHERS TELL ME: "But my fats are often too durk to turn in." It doesn't make a mite of difference how dark or blackened ...or what smelly things like onion or fish you've cooked in your fat. Every drop of it will help make parachutes, synthetic rubber, soaps for the fighting and war fronts. Don't feel ashamed to hand it in to your butcher. If you save every bit of fat you possibly can, you're doing a job to be proud of!

THEN YOU HEAR: "But what sort of container will I use?" Any kind of tin can will do. The next time you open a can of fruit or juice or soup or vegetables, save it. But please don't use glass ...it almost always breaks and makes the fat difficult to salvage. When the can is full, take it to your butcher. For every pound, you'll get 2 red points. If you have any difficulty disposing of your fats, call your Home Demonstration or County Agent.
